

On This Day We Celebrate: Hungary's First King, St. Stephen

About a thousand years ago the Magyar's arrived to the Carpathian Basin and started their long journey to survive. Survive as a country, as a language, and as an independent and free nation of Europe. The person, who started this journey, is the first king of Hungary, St. Stephen. Today we celebrate him and his legacy. About a thousand years passed since he accepted his crown, and today, Hungary is still here to stay as a free, democratic nation, and a proud member of the European Union.
